

Charles Pret. is a very powerful discord moderator and has a bachelors in Reddit. He owns a harem of Discord Kittens who are loyal and at his service. Charles is a very social, well-known, and well-respected leader in his (online) community, and has a bright future ahead of him.

However, Charles has no gamers to game with. His server is filled with filthy casuals, peasants who don't play his games the way they're meant to be played.

And his harem of discord kittens are too bad at their aim to help Charles achieve his desires of playing with fellow serious gamers, let alone being a pro gamer in a pro gamer squad.

How will Charles ever upload his sick frag compilations onto his YouTube channel?

The party then hop into a call, and get on to playing with each other. Thanks to their shared mindset and teamwork, they have a great time.

After gaming on his enemies and collecting enough footage for his frag video, Charles is able to invite his newly made allies into the server he's in allowing them to collaborate and play together again in the future.
